THE PETROLEUM MARKET. NEWS FROM THE FIELD AND RANGE OF PRICES.

Speculation in crude petroleum was dull all the week.
and the trading was entirely confined to professionals, and The market opened on Monday dull and featureless at 83 1.2, and sold steadily up to 85, the highest price of the week, late in the day's transactions. from which time it steadily declined throughout, until on Saturday the lowest figure, 793-8, was reached. The fluctuations all through were confined to narrow limits, the extreme figures only showing a range of 5.5-8 points. The bears systematically hammered prices all through the week whenever a small advance had been accorded. The sharpest decline took place on Friday afternoon, when there was a drive in the last two hours of the transactions, to which prices, however, only yielded 1 1-2 cents. There was little or no news from the fields of sufficient importance to influence the operators, but the dispatches, although meagre, were generally of an encouraging tone. although meagre, were generally of an encouraging tone. The news which was expected of better prospects from Mt. Morris, Penn., did not arrive, although it is stated that favorable dispatches are daily expected from that district. One extremely good feature of the general situation is the fact that there is a great demand for bottoms in American ports, which have been thoroughly seamed in American period, which have been thoroughly appropriate of the expert of all the fill soured to obtain facilities for the export of oil to fill existing foreign orders, while the outlook for the future export trade is good, the European markets all reporting advances during the last week for the American product. Writing from Lendon during the week, Mr. Gibson, of the firm of Watson & Glosen, said of the foreign produc-tion: "Upon inquiry I find that the Russian producers and refiners are pushing their illuminating and intricating said refiners are pushing their illuminating and intricating elis in this market, but at the disadvantage that the British public are slow to make any changa, and as they are educated to use the American article, they prefer it. Small tradesmen, however, find enough difference in favor of the Russian oil to induce them to purchase and retail it, and the trade is increasing. The present price of American refined is 6 pence, and of Russian 5 pence and one farthing, or say 12 cents against 10 1-2 cents, stated in American money. I am informed that Russian oil has in American money. I am informed that Russian oil has been laid down here with a profit at five pence. The been iaid down here with a profit at five pence. The greatest obstacle to the successful introduction of Russian oil in this market is really the matter of transportation, but this difficulty is being removed. The Era Stramship Cempany has now a bulk steamer called the Era, which will this year bring about 100.000 barrels of Russian refined, and this company is constructing a new steamer called the Okra, which will probably carry 150.000 barrels this year. The Standard Oil Company appears to be preparing for more economical working. I hear that they have formed a company here called the Anglo-American Oil Company, with a capital of £500,000, which will be in operation this fall. I presume its purpose is to 60 away with middle men, refined brokers, ship brokers and others who have made their persentage on all oil imported into Great Britain. This will naturally enable the American article to be furnished to the consumer at closer figures, but all people with whem I have conversed say that any austained advance in the price of American crude would play directly into the hands of the Russian deciers and importers.

dealers and importers."

The last sentence of the above letter does not seem in consonance with the difficulty on this side in supplying the European demand, which, locather with the home consumption at the present time, is much in excess of the broduction as reported from the wells. Raiding of prices may be generally looked for as iong as the present dunean of the export markets continue as at present, and there is but little doubt from the outlook that they will be more

THE STOCK EXCHANGE MARKETS.

The general markets for bonds and stocks last week were not of a booming character. There was a steady hardening of values, however, denoting both a growth of confidence and a scarcity of the securities sought after. For some of the low-priced mortgage and income bonds sharp advances in prices were made, and the business in that class of securities was unusually large. For the higher class of bonds the demand was a grow-ing one but business was restricted by small offerson. Repeated efforts were afterward made to get the brother, Patrick Henry, to contribute to her support, but he never responded to the appeals. Miss lafter, but no trace of her can now be found. The stock specularity in the higher class of bonds the demand was a grow-ing at the current quotations. The stock specularity is at the current quotations. The st reduction, and the later movements carried prices only fractions above the plane from which the decline had been made. It is these frequent fluctuations, every one of which at the time was called the beginning of a reaction, which keep the market in a satisfactory condition. From the prices of June 12 there has been an advance ranging from five to twelve points for the principal active stocks. But during this period there have been at least ten reactions, ranging from 1 1-2 to 2 1-2 per cent. Consider-
